Kids Need DHA-Powered Mighty Smart™

- DHA is an essential omega-3 fatty acid that affects early brain development
- A recent published study showed that children ages 4–12 taking 100 mg of DHA per day were able to increase their levels of DHA by 65%–70%
- Studies show that many kids don't get enough of this important nutrient
- Foods high in DHA—such as sardines, tuna, and organ meats such as liver—are not kids' favourites
- Eating large amounts of fish can lead to unhealthy exposure to mercury and other environmental toxins, which can be especially harmful to children
